Capítulo 2

Las aventuras en el Ártico

En 1891, Hansen y Peary comprendieron la primera de muchas expediciones a Groenlandia, el lugar más cercano al casquete polar ártico. Chazar el casquete polar ártico y llegar al Polo Norte. Pero no era una aventura sencilla, pero querían intentarlo de todos modos.

El casquete polar ártico es un río de agua congelada. Se expande durante el invierno cuando el agua se congela y se contrae y se rompe en pedruzcos. El deshielo de Hansen y Peary era esencial para sobrevivir en estas condiciones tan peligrosas, así como en el implacable clima del Ártico, con sus vientos fuertes, mucha nieve y temperaturas heladas.

Expediciones polares

Hansen viajó con Peary a Groenlandia. Él se convirtió de muchos viajes que hicieron.	Hansen acompañó a Peary en una expedición de ida y vuelta a Groenlandia. Su objetivo era probar si se podía ir desde el casquete polar. Se quedaron en diferentes lugares de la expedición. Peary y su equipo fueron los primeros de ida y vuelta.	Hansen y Peary fueron a Groenlandia.	Peary y Hansen exploraron Groenlandia para tratar de llegar al Polo Norte, pero solo lo lograron por falta de alimentos y provisiones.	Peary y su equipo, en colaboración con Hansen, fueron los primeros en llegar al Polo Norte.	Peary y su equipo fueron los primeros en llegar al Polo Norte. Él es el más reciente de los expedicionarios que lo hicieron.
